ELECTION CHARGES
AFFECT EDWARDS

Senator Mackay - Reveals
Cause of Demand for $25,- 000 to Follow Inquiry.

HUGE FRAUDS ALLEGED

Governor's Plurality in Hudson County to Be Investigated.

BUGBEE LOOKED WINNER

Republican Candidate Was
Snowed Under in One Spot
After Sweeping State.

Much delving into the conduct of election affairs last fall in Hudson county has convinced members of the Mackay investigating committee that frauds demanding its attention were committed in the election of 1919, at which Gov. Edward I. Edwards was swept into office.

This statement was made yesterday by State Senator William B. Mackay, chairman of the investigating committee of the New Jersey Legislature.
It will be recalled that the enormous plurality rolled up for Gov. Edwards in Hudson county resulted in his election.

No previous intimation has been made by Senator Mackay that the investigation of administrative bodies in Hudson county, including the commission governments of Jersey City and Hoboken, and of the 1920 election, had led the committee back into the middle of the campaign for Governor. Senator Mackay's statement was made exclusively to THE NEW YORK HERALD following the action of Gov. Edwards on Wednesday in disapproving the House resolution increasing from $10,- 000 to $25,000 the appropriation for the committee.

"Wholesale Frauds" Uncovered.

"I am sure that Gov. Edwards would not have taken this action had he known that the committee had decided to go into certain matters connected with the election of 1919 in Hudson county," Senator Mackay said yesterday. "He will realize, I am sure, that his action in disapproving of the $15,000 needed to continue the probe, and particularly to go back into the 1915 campaign, places him in a false position. I am sure that he had no intimation that the committee intended to survey this part of the Hudson county situation."

"Since the Legislature adjourned last Friday the committee can secure no money from it. Unless we have additional funds we will be compelled to drop the 1919 election. Under these circumstances, the Governor, not wishing to be placed in an awkward position, might reconsider his action. The money, I believe, could be granted by the State House Commission, consisting of the Governor, the State Treasurer and the State Comptroller."

Senator Mackay said that the investigation of the campaign last fall had uncovered "wholesale frauds," as well as much actual violence. "The investigation, to date, has shown numerous frauds grossly apparent on the face of the returns," he said. "For example, in the matter of the fight for Sheriff, where a vote had been cast for Andrew Hart, Republican candidate, and the rest of the Republican ticket, some one on many ballots had put a cross opposite the name of Madigan, the Democratic candidate, in order to invalidate the Hart vote."

"In West New York there were erasures of the name of the Republican candidate for Freeholder and also for other offices on the Republican ticket. Crosses were inserted opposite the Democratic candidates. Moreover, the markings were such that the change could not have been made by the individual voters."

Big Plurality in Hudson.

"Extreme violence also prevailed in some of the Jersey City wards. Princeton students designated as watchers for the Honest Ballot Association were particularly marked for attack."

Senator Mackay said that Newton A.
K. Bugbee, Republican candidate for Governor, approached the Hudson county line a victor by 21,570 votes, but that he was snowed under in this county, the storm centre of Jersey politics, by a plurality for Gov. Edwards of 36,000 votes.

Commissioner Harry L. Schmulling of Hoboken, in charge of parks and playgrounds, admitted various irregularities in his office in the course of an uneasy afternoon yesterday on the witness stand in the Hudson County Court House in Jersey City. He faced a rapid fire of questions from John A. Bernhard, counsel for the Mackay committee.
He admitted that before the May election in 1919, at which he and the rest of the commission were re-elected, his regular force of twenty-five men taking charge of playgrounds, etc., had jumped to 307 men and fallen again, a day or so after the election, to the previous figures. Mr. Schmulling explained that he was busy getting ready, not for the election, but for the baseball season, and that he was also inspired by patriotic reasons, because the Federal and State governments had appealed for employment for demobilized soldiers and sailors.

Several young men employed at this time testified that they did little or nothing in the way of work, one adding that his only duty was to "boost the commissioners."

Commissioner Schmulling admitted that he had failed to sign affidavits on seventy-seven payrolls involving around $20,000 certifying that work had been done, but denied that he had done this to escape indictment. He had overlooked them, he said. He denied that he knew that treasurer had no right to sign checks without his signature to the affidavits.

Questioned about the testimony of Rudolph Schroeder of Weehawken, a lawyer, that 127 employed on the army playgrounds were also on the city payroll at the same time, Mr. Schmulling suggested they might have been working nights for the army. He said that he had caused no investigation to be made of any circumstances surrounding the so-called "padding payroll," as his conscience was clear.

SENT TO NASSAU JAIL
ON HIS WIFE'S CHARGE

J. J. McIntyre of Rockville Centre Is Committed.

James J. McIntyre, 70, a prominent and well-to-do resident of Rockville Centre, L. I., was committed to the Nassau county jail yesterday afternoon on a charge of third degree assault, preferred by his wife, who is 72. She says her husband kicked her so hard that she had to call a physician.

Mrs. McIntyre was found in the roadway by a chauffeur, who helped revive her. She was taken before Justice of the Peace Ralph of Lawrence, and the warrant for her husband was sworn out.
Tom Chronopoulos, who was with her, was called to the McIntyre home Saturday by Mrs. McIntyre, who said that her husband had threatened to shoot her, claiming that she had been receiving the attentions of young men. The constable said he took a revolver away from McIntyre on that occasion.

BROOKLYN MAN, 70, HELD AS BIGAMIST

Woman Said to Be His Fourth Wife Brings Charge.

Roscoe Reich, 70, bookkeeper for a Brooklyn retail company, was arraigned yesterday in Gates avenue court on a charge of bigamy on complaint of his alleged fourth wife, who said she formerly was Mrs. Augusta M. Holmud of 672 Sterling place, Brooklyn. Reich was examined and was held by Magistrate Short in $2,500 bail for the Grand Jury.

The charge of bigamy was based on a copy of a marriage certificate dated November 6, 1878, showing that Reich and Mrs. Ella H. Schirmer of Tamaqua, Pa., were married on that date. She was said to have been Reich's second wife. A marriage to a third, Reich said, was annulled in 1912. He denied he had told Mrs. Holmud that he was a widower.

GOVERNOR AT UNVEILING.

declined to attend the unveiling ceremonies of the statue of Gen. Simon Bolivar in Central Park next Tuesday, because of official business, sent word yesterday to John Barrett, representative of the Government of Venezuela, it would be possible for him to be present. He will join President Harding in the Waldorf when the President arrives from Washington.

draws to oust Esther M. Tattall, which has been done."

The senior Mrs. Andrews, relieved last night of the presence of her husband and her rival, said she was "happier than she had been for years," and that the "settlement" was better than she expected. She would not say what this "settlement" was. It was reported in Jersey City that Andrews had finally agreed not to contest her suit for divorce and to give her a generous allowance.

"Do you think your husband will pay?" she was asked.

"Yes," she said. "I do, because he has been honest throughout."

"So you are going to keep the children and have peace?"

"Yes, thank God."

Andrews and the two wives shared the apartment as usual Wednesday night. Yesterday morning, however, voices were raised as if in altercation.
Andrews, in shirt sleeves, poked his head out of the door long enough to tell reporters that the publication of his marrimonial affairs was inspired by a business enemy, that everything would be straightened out and that he would be in his office at 29 Broad street, Manhattan, at 4 P. M. to tell the whole story. Somewhere in the apartment a woman's voice said, "Oh, it can't be straightened out." The two Andrews wives were visible. The younger one has not the use of her legs. He pulls himself along the floor with his hands.

Andrews went to his office in the morning and was visited by a man who pulled back his coat and displayed a gold badge, but who wouldn't answer when outsiders asked him if he was from the Department of Justice. Later Andrews called on his counsel, J. J.
Lazarus, 25 West Forty-third street, and then went home to arrange some agreement between the two wives.

Mrs. Andrews No. 1, who is known as "Mother" by the second Mrs. Andrews as well as by the husband and the boys, left the apartment house at 2 P. M. to go to Newark. An hour and thirty-quarters later Mrs. Andrews No. 2 departed for the same city. John, the elder boy, accompanied her as far as the tube station, then returned, and he passed in a vaudeville, beside his homer

At 4:30 P. M. Andrews sauntered out of the house and over to a garage to get his runabout. It is a sporty runabout with alligators on the windshield. An-drews's attire was equal to the car. Pearl Podora hat, light pin checked suit, light chinchilla overcoat, narrowed and belted at the waist—these were the most conspicuous items of his raiment. He soon long nose, his eyes are uncommonly close together. Tortoise shell glasses bridged the nose.

He dashed joyfully up the Boulevard and disappeared. While he was gone the senior wife back from Newark, and her new counsel, George Furst, was with her. She was laughing when she entered the apartment house. At 5:30 the husband returned with the senior wife. In a few minutes they returned to the street. Andrews had two suitcases and hung them into the car. He then while upstairs packing the suitcases.
She remained in her ivory tinted bedroom in an alcove. Evidently Andrews had given up his key to the apartment earlier in the afternoon, for when he went after the suitcases he could not open the door, and remarked: "Well, I guess I'm through here." Then he rapped, as if signaling, and Estelle, the senior maid, opened the door.

William Cahill, agent for the Michel & Moore Company, which has charge of the apartment house, was hovering about most of the day trying to serve dispossession notices. The women wouldn't let him in, and a trip up a fire escape was not more successful.

But by the time Andrews and the elder wife returned the renting agent had disappeared. Lawyer Furst was asked what he meant by saying "I'm through here."

formal statement: "We have advised Mrs. M. A. Andrews to oust Esther M.
Tattall, which has been done."

"It means," Mr. Furst said, "that she told the second wife that if she didn't go the police would be called in."

But during the morning the two women were on speaking terms at least.
When newspaper men called the younger wife, at the door, called: "Mother, would you like to say anything to the reporters?"

"No," said "mother."

No charge against Andrews has been made in New Jersey. Pierre P. Garven, Prosecutor of Pinea, said: "If his second marriage took place in Connecticut the bigamy, if any was committed, is out of our jurisdiction."

Andrews has said that if it came to a test his first marriage would not stand. He evidently is prepared to contend that he was only 18 years old and did not know his own mind when he married Maud Haynes in 1912. He was reported as saying this yesterday morning over the telephone to a brother of his second wife in Pittsburgh. He told the brother he would be in Pittsburgh Monday and would explain the fact of two wives living under the same roof.
Mrs. L. Tattall of Pittsburgh, mother of wife No. 2, stands by her daughter and son-in-law. "If by any chance the claim of Mrs. Maud Andrews should be found just the door of my home is always open to my daughter," she said.

The marriage certificate issued in Portland, Me., on June 17, 1912, gives the age of Andrews as 24, not 18. The second marriage took place nearly nine years later. If Andrews was 24 when he married Maud Haynes he was 33 when he married Esther Tattall, his stepdaughter. But the second marriage certificate gives his age as 29.

The odor of something like ether outside the Andrews apartment caused Lieut. Van Horn and three patrolmen to visit the apartment at 10 o'clock last night. After calling and rapping twice without getting a response the police put their shoulders to the door. The lock and a chain and bolt gave way.
As the policemen burst in Mrs. Maud Andrews, shaking with fright, appeared from her bedroom in her nightgown.
The police explained. Mrs. Andrews began crying. She said her husband had gone away without saying goodbye, but, however worried she might be, solicitude was further from her thoughts.

NOUVELLE MARQUE DÉPOSÉE

the inauguration of a week-end cable letter service between our New York offices and our cable stations in the cities listed.

These week-end letters may be filed over the counter in our offices during the week to be forwarded before midnight Saturday; delivery to be made the following Monday morning.

To points beyond our stations, week-end letters will be mailed from our nearest terminal office. These must bear full post office address, and will be accepted only at the sender's risk.

Rates and conditions of this service on request at any of our offices.

The inauguration of this service is another step forward in our endeavors to increase the facilities for communication between "The Americas."

To insure rapid, accurate and direct transmission of your cables to Latin America, mark them "Via All America."
